"What we must now do is emphasize that higher education is not only good in itself, but also that, either in the short run or, more importantly, in the long run, investment in higher education must result in substantial augmentation of the economic base of a particular state and of the New England region. My own impression is that the value of the investment in higher education has not been fully understood intellectually and certainly not in terms of the emotion-laden response of legislators and governors when the chips are down and they must cope with a shortfall in taxes or an excess in expenditures in the state budget."

--Senator Robert J. McKenna in the Foreword to Financing Higher Education: The Public Investment. John C. Hoy and Melvin Bernstein, Eds. (New England Board of Higher Education). Published by Auburn House, Boston, MA., page viii. 1982.

SOUTH DAKOTA provided some news items pertaining to the actions taken by the state legislature in 1984. The mission of Dakota State College was changed from liberal arts to computer information systems and computer teacher education, and one million dollars was appropriated to effect this transformation over the next three years. General funds, replaced by other resources in fiscal years 1983 and 1984, were reinstated into the budget. The Springfield branch of the University was closed.

MICHIGAN. Two aspects of the 1984 Michigan report are especially noteworthy. It is observed that for the fiscal year 1984-85 Michigan has joined the four other states (California, Illinois, New York and Texas) that make an annual appropriation of state tax funds for higher education of over one billion dollars. The amount of $1,005,862 appropriated for higher education in Michigan represents a two-year gain of 16%. The percentage of gain is the largest in the last five years. The trend is upward.
